

TRAPPED GERMAN FORCES ON CAP BON BEGIN A MINOR DUNKIRK IN REVERSE AS ALL AXIS RESISTANCE COLLAPSES

Noticeable Lack of Axis Air Power—Once-Mighty Luftwaffe Appears to Have Been Shot Out of Sky—No Massed Evacuation Attempts—Whole Peninsula is Closely Blockaded

By International News Service
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, May 10.—The trapped German forces on the Cap Bon Peninsula today began to undergo a minor Dunkirk in reverse following collapse of all Axis resistance in northeastern Tunisia.

The Axis forces tried desperately to escape across the Sicilian Straits, using small barges along the 50-mile coastal strip on both sides of the promontory.

Scores of American and British fighters and bombers swept down from the skies to blast innumerable bobbing craft loaded with men and prevented other craft from landing or taking off from the beaches.

There was a noticeable lack of Axis air power. The once-mighty Luftwaffe appeared to have been shot out of the sky. No planes gave battle to the Allied aircraft and from indications the Luftwaffe had abandoned the remaining Axis forces to their fate.

There were no massed evacuation attempts, military observers said. All of the attempts to escape were made by small parties. The whole Cap Bon peninsula is closely blockaded, although full reports still are lacking from many ships at sea. Numerous incidents involving small evacuation craft are known to have taken place.

Axis forces in northeastern Tunisia have unconditionally surrendered to the American army, ending all resistance southeast of Bizerte, General Dwight D. Eisenhower announced today.

Twenty-five thousand prisoners were taken by the American Second Army Corps when organized fighting ceased, the official communique said, adding that the terms of surrender were "unconditional." Six generals were included among the prisoners. The new group of captives brought the number of Axis soldiers taken prisoner since Friday to 75,000, fitting possibly an equal number of enemy troops still at large in Tunisia. Fifty thousand are estimated to be fleeing into the Cap Bon Peninsula.

MIGNONI AND MARINO WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

Rev. Fr. Anthony Ciampa, of Texas, Uncle of Bride, Officiates

DINNER, RECEPTION

Ensign Carmen Mignoni took as his bride in a Sunday ceremony, Miss Carolyn E. Marino; daughter of Mrs. Rose Marino, of 217 Dorchester street, the 10 o'clock mass being celebrated in St. Ann's R. C. Church by the Rev. Fr. Anthony Ciampa, of Sarita, Texas, an uncle of the bride. Also present in the chancel was the Rev. Fr. Peter Pinci, of St. Ann's parish.

Making her way to the altar the bride was escorted by her brother, Mr. Frank Marino, who gave her in marriage. Music for the processional was provided by the organist, Miss Frances Tamburella, a cousin of the bride, who also accompanied the church choir which sang during the mass. The edifice was attractive in decorations of palms and white flowers.

Ensign Mignoni, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mignoni, 4 Mill street, is located at the Philadelphia Navy Yard at present.

To Erect Flag-Pole At 6th Ward Plaque Tonight

A corps of men having mixed and poured a large amount of concrete for the flag-pole base and leveled the flag-stands of the Sixth Ward Plaque site, Friday evening, the task of inserting the 30-foot steel flag-pole will be undertaken this evening, and the use of the Superior Zinc Co.'s crane has been offered to assist in the erection, if necessary.

At the present time 194 names adorn the plaque, and are laid out in a most attractive manner. William J. Mack states there will be about 200 names by Sunday, when the dedication takes place at 1:30 p. m. Because a picture of the completed undertaking is to appear on the cover of the proposed elaborate souvenir program, it is likely that Mr. Mack will insert the completed name-plate in the plaque on Tuesday. Among the names are two WAVES and two Army Nurses.

The American Eagle which should rest atop the plaque was damaged in transit and will be replaced with a new one before the ceremonies take place.

Because the erection of the flag-pole this evening calls for much care and manpower, William J. Dougherty, general chairman, requests the services of as many volunteers as possible. He also requests a large turn-out at the meeting Wednesday evening in Karp's Hall at seven o'clock, as this may be the last meeting before the dedication takes place.

By John Paget
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, May 10.—Gov. Edward Martin's desk was piled high today with more than 375 bills representing the accomplishments which adjourned after an 18-week session.

The final gavel fell yesterday at 4:48 a. m., ending the shortest session since 1923. The Governor said he was "pleased" with the Assembly's work, emphasizing that many of the laws "will have an important part in speeding the war effort."

vetoed two others. The Legislature convened January 5th.

During the closing hours the Assembly enacted bills permitting the State Defense Council to strengthen Civilian Defense laws to control "black markets"; prohibiting labor unions from making political contributions under a $5,000 penalty; earmarking money for police pension funds; allowing 14-year-old children to work on farms in areas where labor shortages exist; transferring the appointments of 368 employees of the inheritance tax division from the Democratic Auditor General's department to the Republican Secretary of Revenue; repeal

WOODEN JAP SHIPS

American submarines have inflicted serious damage on Japanese shipping in its own home waters. Moreover, the battles around the Solomon Islands and New Guinea also have cost them many large and small transports. But according to information available now, the Japanese are using new ships made of wood in coastwise operations, and have at their disposal a sizable tonnage which could be used as army transports.

The wooden ships can be built almost anywhere in record time and are provided with auxiliary motors. They are reported to be of 2,000 tons or less and are not as satisfactory as regular merchantmen, but they may be put to the work of regular cargo vessels on routes between the Japanese islands and conquered territories.

While the Japanese coastwise transportation problem is reported to have been partially solved, the heavy losses suffered by the enemy merchant marine are yet to be replaced from the yards in Indo-China, Singapore and the Netherlands Indies. It may be assumed that British and Dutch yards, which were only partially destroyed before their capture, have been refitted. The yards in Indo-China were seized by the Japanese intact.

Facilities of all these yards—some were intended only for major repair work—have been improved to a point that they can produce some ships of most new types except large battleships and carriers. It is in these yards and at Hong Kong that the Japanese repair their damaged warships and build new merchantmen which they may now employ as transports.

YOUTH SERVICE

The President said upon his return from a seventeen-day tour of the country that he believes that every young American should give a year of service to the country. He did not limit the proposal to young men or to military service, nor did he mention the year in their lives during which they would be expected to serve the government.

Although he specifically objected to the term "compulsory service" in discussing the proposal, the element of compulsion can not be avoided. In the totalitarian countries which employed this system of regimenting youth, the young people have no choice in the matter. If they are physically and mentally able to be put through the political mill, they are compelled to report for processing.

Although this country may be induced by the experience of this war and the war of twenty-five years ago, and the condition of the world after this war, to adopt some form of compulsory military training for all fit young men, it probably will never elect a Congress that will carry out the President's suggestion.

The people would never intrust their sons and daughters to swarms of Federal employees who would quickly organize themselves as a political pressure group and try to regiment their charges in a despotic manner.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol August 11, 1881. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last week, a stable along the race in the third ward, was in imminent danger of burning, evidently through the work of an incendiary. The building is on the property of and belongs to Dennis Callahan. A young girl, the niece of Michael Dougherty, saw the flames and sounded the alarm, and a few buckets of water put a damper on the business. It was then discovered that a pile of combustible material had been put in close proximity to the stable, and set fire to it and it was this material burning which drew the attention of the girl.

A large party of Bristol Methodists paid fifty cents each last Sunday to be transported to the camp meeting at Simpson Grove. They found the ground crowded. It was estimated that 3,000 persons were present. At the morning services, Rev. Mr. Maulbury, of the New Jersey Conference, preached to a large assemblage in the pavilion, and in the afternoon, Rev. W. H. Elliott, of Philadelphia, delivered a sermon, in which he paid his respects to the Spiritualists encamped nearby.

There are all sorts of rumors about what the Pennsylvania Railroad is going to do in Bristol, but nobody seems to have any accurate information to reveal. Besides the two additional tracks which are to be laid and the $300,000 (more or less) freight house which is to be put up, if reports are true, there is to be a round-house built and the establishment of car shops, all of which we hope may be true.

Willie Wright, the son of our burgess, curved a baseball so effectively while playing a game last week that he now carries his right arm in a sling. He broke his arm.

The sixth annual convention of the Lyceums of Bucks County takes place next Saturday week, the 20th instant at Langhorne Park.

Recently while digging a trench in Burlington, N. J., the workmen discovered a portion of the cellar wall of the once noted residence of John Tatham erected in 1690. In the records of the county this house was termed a "great and stately palace." It was repeatedly damaged by fire, and finally, in 1748, was thus consumed.

Frank Joyce, who is well known in our borough, having resided here for a number of years, but now living at Flashing with his mother, was, according to the Advance, quite badly hurt near Poverty Cross, last week, while out driving with his brother. The clip of the shaft broke, which set the horse to kicking. It is supposed Frank attempted to jump out of the carriage when he struck his head. He lay insensible for many hours after he was taken home. After he came to he had repeated sinking spells. His hurt is a very serious one.

It is Baddeck, in Nova Scotia, where Rev. J. W. Lee of our borough is keeping cool.

On the peak of the Allegheny mountains in this state is located Cresson. It is at this altitudinous resort that John H. Boetwick is inhaling the invigorating air of the mountains.

Although the borough council and Fire Company No. 1 have agreed to compensate any of the carters who will, in case of fire, hitch up their horses to the steamer, nobody has yet been found willing to perform the work when the occasion has come for it to be done. It is one of the isolated instances where no one is found who wants to earn a fee for comparatively little work.

FASHION PARADE

By Mido Anderson

(Famous Hollywood Style Writer for International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—The traditional summer colors, navy and white, can be forgotten for the duration. The dyes that go to make up smart navy blue have been drafted, and it looks like black and white are the new summer duo.

Viewing the Etienne Ret exhibit-tion at the Hatfield Galleries, was Faye Emerson, Warner Bros. actress. Cut on simple lines, her frock had a narrow, slit neck, and V-yoke at the waist. White pique was applied on the shoulder and the base of the skirt. In the form of large roses. The actress, currently seen in "Air Force," wore a hat made of two more white pique roses.

Another admirer of Mr. Ret's paintings was Jane Wyatt in a black spun rayon, self-belted. The dress was crisply trimmed with white ecru batiste ruffles. A black straw hat, large-brimmed, sat straight on her head.

One of thousands who heard Mrs. Chiang Kai-Shek at the Hollywood Bowl, was Dolores Moran, Warner Bros. beauty. A soft version of the coat dress was her outfit in summer black. A leaf design was traced down both short sleeves in cutout work, and was outlined with fine white braid. White croch buttons were accents down the front closing. A small black parasol kept the sun from her eyes.

Very simple was the dressy dress Julie Bishop wore at the wedding reception Ann Sheridan gave for her secretary. The frock was the simplest kind of chemise dress, accented only by the row of ruffled bows down the front. The neckline was low, and oblong, the sleeves short. Her hat was the cartwheel type in black straw, with a bumper brim effect of stiff black net.

Cocktailing at the Beverly Wilshire, Joan Crawford wore a black satin afternoon dress with diminutive cap sleeves. The neck was low cut, square and slightly draped, edged with a row of exquisite lace. The skirt was side-slit for an inch. An American Beauty rose was tucked in at the waist.

BE THE MAN BEHIND THE HOE FOR VICTORY— HINTS ON PLANNING, PLANTING OF GARDEN

By Jane Cochran

(U. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, May 10—(INS)—Drag out that hoe and get the blade sharpened. You're going to need it if you're raising a victory garden this summer. Tasty string beans, roasting ears and red, ripe tomatoes don't just grow themselves—they need planning, care and downright work before they make their debut on your dinner table.

But work is good for the waistline, and exercise in the fresh air will be as beneficial to you as the vitamins you'll get from your vegetables.

A victory garden is fun, but don't plant one for a lark. Make up your mind that you're doing it in earnest and plan it carefully. This year you'll grow or do without, and once started, you'll have to carry it through to the harvest.

There's no mystery about growing vegetables and fruits. Discounting such disconcerting factors as bugs and droughts, gardens will grow according to plan. First plan, and don't be afraid to ask advice. The expert gardener likes nothing better than to share his knowledge with a beginner and in this food-short year, all types of volunteer agencies will gladly come to your rescue. The food you grow in your own garden will help win this war just as surely as the dollars you put into war bonds.

You've decided to grow a garden—now how to begin? First, find out if you can. Vegetables need good soils, good drainage and at least six hours of direct sun a day. However, a little lime and fertilizer, especially manure, will work wonders on a sour piece of ground. Check your soil with an expert.

Plant your garden on paper first—sit down at your desk and figure out the space you have and what your family needs. A well planned 20 by 30 foot garden will provide the vegetables for a family of three or four all summer and will leave some over for canning.

In figuring out your garden, consider your family's likes and dislikes. Vitamins or no vitamins, the human factor can't be ignored. There's not a bit of use in the world of planting Swiss chard or brussels sprouts if your family simply won't eat them.

There's also no point in growing vegetables that don't do well in your climate or your locality. Corn grows fine in small towns or the country, but it isn't very satisfactory in the city. Almost everyone likes peas but they don't do well in many localities. But vegetables that grow well in your soil and climate and please the family's tastes should by all means be included in your Victory Garden.

This basic plan, for a 20 by 30 foot garden, must be altered to suit your own needs and conditions, but it includes all the "must" vegetables.

Plan two rows of tomato plants at the end of your garden, the first row of a medium early variety and the second of medium or late types.

Tomato rows should be planted 30 inches apart—they cover a lot of space when they're full grown. Thirty inches away from your second tomato row, plant ½ row of yellow bush squash and ½ row of curled kale or mustard.

Allow 18 inches and then plant a row of green snap beans, followed by a row each of yellow snap beans and bush lima beans planted 18 inches apart.

Next, 18 inches from the limas, plant a row of early brocoli. Later plant salad greens there.

Plant leaf lettuce in the next row, and later in the season plant late brocoli. Allow 15 inches and plant a row of early beets, the space to be filled with late carrots when you've eaten the beets.

Early carrots fill the next row, 15 inches away. Mix radish seeds in with the carrots, and follow with late beets.

The next row, also 15 inches away, is filled with onion sets or plants, and followed with late turnips for storing.

Your vegetables will be doubly delicious if you have a centerpiece of fresh flowers on the table when they're served, so plant your last row as a border of colorful annual flowers, zinnias, marigolds, petunias, snap dragon or any of the full flowering, easy to grow varieties.

ROAD TO TOTALITARIANISM

"Of one thing we can be sure: That if Mr. Roosevelt is elected to a fourth term next year, we shall have voted ourselves onto the high road to totalitarianism. . . . If he gets a fourth term, he will be able to get a fifth term virtually for the asking. These tendencies toward dictatorship and permanent monarchy build up like snowballs rolling down hill."

PAIDS AT SHOULDERS PROVIDE A LIFT TO WOMEN'S COSTUMES

By Mrs. Katharine G. Moon (Home Economics Representative)
Making shoulder pads for a dress or coat is a simple problem. The right pads for each garment will give it a new lease on life.

Here is how to make the pads: Cut two squares of muslin from 6 to 7½ inches, depending upon the size of the person, the type and weight of the garment. Place cotton batting between these squares, building up so it is three-fourths of an inch thick in the center of the square and tapering to nothing at the edges. Tack muslin and cotton loosely at intervals to keep the cotton in place, then cut the square in half diagonally to make two pads. Leave the edges open so the pad remains thicker at the outer edge.

Cover each pad with the dress fabric and attach to the armhole and shoulder seam, with the long edge of the triangle at the armhole and the point opposite it on the shoulder seam. Tack all three points.

The setting of the pads is important so fit the pads before sewing them in securely.

By placing pads so they extend beyond the shoulder line, narrow shoulders can be built out. Sloping shoulders can be built up by using the seven-inch square and putting most of the cotton in the center.

For round shoulders, shift the bulk of the pad a little to the back of the shoulder, and place the thickest part of the pad in front of shoulder seams to take care of hollow shoulders.

For sheer dresses and blouses it is desirable to use layers or ruffles of organdy for pads. Coats and suits require heavier and firmer pads which are put under the lining.

THAT MAN IS MINE by May Christie

SYNOPSIS

Ann Foster, salesgirl at "Marks-Park Avenue" in New York City, is transferred to the Miami Beach branch of that store, where the manager, impressed with her unusual beauty, engages her as a model. Julia, her practical-minded sister, an airline stewardess on the New York-Miami run, persistently encourages her to marry millionaire Vince Ogden, but Ann does not love him. At Mrs. Avery Willard's War Relief Tea, Ann meets Jim Brent, handsome pilot officer, engaged in training cadets at a nearby airfield. From Vince she learns that Jim is teaching Lotus Willard to fly her own plane and the consensus is he will supplant Hank Brugger, society hanger-on, in the frivolous Mrs. Willard's life. Piloted by Vince and Hank, Ann sells lottery tickets on a beautiful gown donated by her store. Later, dancing with Jim, she is aware they are mutually attracted but senses a certain aloofness in him. Vince wins the gown and presents it to Ann who, overhearing a disappointed dowager's catty remark, announces she will react to the gown for the War Relief. Vince outbids everyone this time giving the frock to Julia. The tea over, he invites the crowd to dine aboard his yacht, "The Pelican."

CHAPTER SEVEN

"Of course we'll come, Vince," Julia cut in. "But first we'll dash to the apartment, and I'll get into this gorgeous gown. Ever so many thanks again for it."

Ann said firmly: "You'll have to excuse me, Vince. I'm exhausted, and I've got a headache. Count me out, please."

"Ho! Sore? Don't you know I'm mad about you, precious? I'll buy you another gown just like Julia's! The tender will be waiting at the pier for you. Come on, now—say you're coming?" he coaxed thickly.

"Ab-so-lutely not! But I darsay Julia will go. I'm going to bed."

On that, Ann turned and went off for her wrap. Dinner on Vince's boat would be such an anti-climax after her reunion with the fascinating flyer. The spark, she felt, had been lit between them. It would be sweet to be alone in her little apartment, dreaming of him.

Julia followed her to the cloakroom and said sharply: "Ann, you're being a complete fool!"

But Ann's smile was like the Mona Lisa, holding a delicious little secret.

Ann's tiny, second-hand car was in the drive. As the sisters reached it, Mrs. Avery Willard and Jim Brent were stepping into Vince's sports-Packard, with Vince at the wheel. "All aboard for the yacht!" yelled Vince, as he flew by them, and at the gates turned toward Biscayne Bay.

Ann, ironically, felt horribly let down. Jim was going aboard Vince's yacht for dinner! She'd flatly declined Vince's invitation, never dreaming Jim was going! And now pride wouldn't let her alter her decision.

Nor did it make things better that Julia nagged her as the shabby little car wheeled and rattled home.

She continued her lecture as they walked through the winding courtyard, and up the bougainvillea-twined stairs to the tiny apartment. Ann, with tears in her eyes, walked out on the diminutive wooden balcony beyond the small living-room, so that Julia might not see her distress. The night-blooming jasmine in the garden below had opened, and was giving out intoxicating sweetness. It brought back to her the heady conversation with Jim.

"Juliet without a Romeo," called Julia derisively, "and of her own choice!" She flounced into the one small bedroom, and slammed the door. Presently she flung it open, to demand the loan of a pair of silk stockings, and Ann's silver kid slippers with the French buckles.

"Of all the fools who ever had a

We've no one back of us! Stop moaning! Money doesn't grow on trees! I may be only an air-stewardess—and blamed sick of it—but my feet are firmly on the earth! Can't you see this is the chance of a lifetime?"

"No. We talk different languages, that's all," Ann quavered.

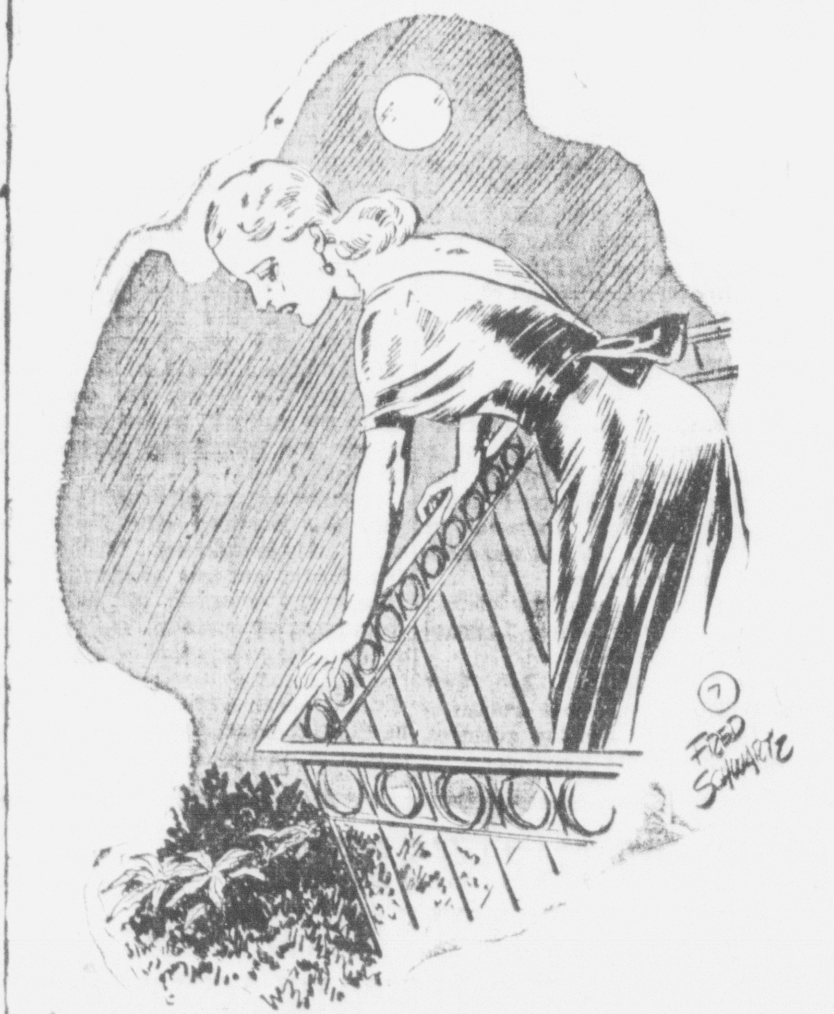

Julia was quick to take advantage of that tremble in her sister's voice. She ran to her, flung her arms about her, and kissed her.

"Don't you know I love you, Ann? You're all I've got in this rotten world, and I want you to be happy, honey!"

"Happiness doesn't lie with Vince,"—in a low shaken tone.

"Money can buy a darned good counterfeit of happiness, darling," insisted the practical older sister.

She slid into the new orchid-and-rich bean eating out of her hand! But you'd rather we both slave for a living, wouldn't you? You know what it would mean to both of us if you'd only give Vince a tumble!"

"I don't love him," Ann said.

"Love? Phooey! Bunk! Suppose he does nauseate you—(though why a girl without a nickel should be so darned squeamish is beyond me!)—the law doesn't compel you to go on living with him! You could get a darned good settlement out of him, that's what!"

"You revolt me when you talk like that, Julia! If mother or father were alive, and heard!" Ann sighed.

"That's the very reason you ought to grab yourself a future, idiot!"

rose gown. "Get an eyeful of me in this dress! See what it does for me! See what money does for me! The ugly duckling changed into a bird-of-paradise!"

"You shan't belittle your looks—you're always very handsome, Julia—but you do look lovely in that gown," admitted Ann, "and now I'll run you to the pier, and come back, and get to bed early."

Despite further protestations, she donned blue patio pajamas, tied a bright scarf about her hair, chauffeured her sister to the waiting tender, and returned to the little apartment.

Only Bristol High Man To Finish First in Meet Held Saturday

B. H. S. SCORES 22 PTS.

Joe Sagolla Has Two Second Places To His Credit In The Meet

Bristol High School's track team scored 22 points in the track meet held at George School Saturday afternoon. Ten schools from Pennsylvania and New Jersey participated. No point scoring was kept officially, it being more of an individual meet than team meet.

Paul Ruby scored Bristol's only first place in the meet, he winning the javelin throw with a heave of 172 feet. Paul also tied for first in the high jump but lost out because he received more tries than his opponent. The height was 5 feet, 7 inches.

Joe Sagolla had two second places to his credit, finishing in this position in both the 100 and 200 yard dashes. In the 100, Ned Stetson, of the Bunnies, came in fourth. In the mile run, Art Goheen finished in fourth place.

Cattle Sale is Big Attraction Today

Promptly at 11 o'clock the main attraction of the sale took place when bidders viewed "Dean of the Pearls". Great interest was shown in this prize young sire who has approximately 30 living daughters. Four daughters of "Dean of the Pearls" will also be sold today. The 55 from the Canby herd represent 38 of the milking stock and some young animals. Decision to sell the part of the herd, which he has been building up for a quarter century, was reached by Mr. Canby when the labor situation became acute.

The remaining animals to be sold are from the Lauxmont, Pendella, Dunlopin and Willow Ridge farms.

A large tent was erected in the pasture for accommodation of those attending the sale. Auctioneers for the day are: Austin Backus, Mexico, N. Y.; Clarence Smith, Pinconning, Mich.; and Newlin Brown, Doylestown.

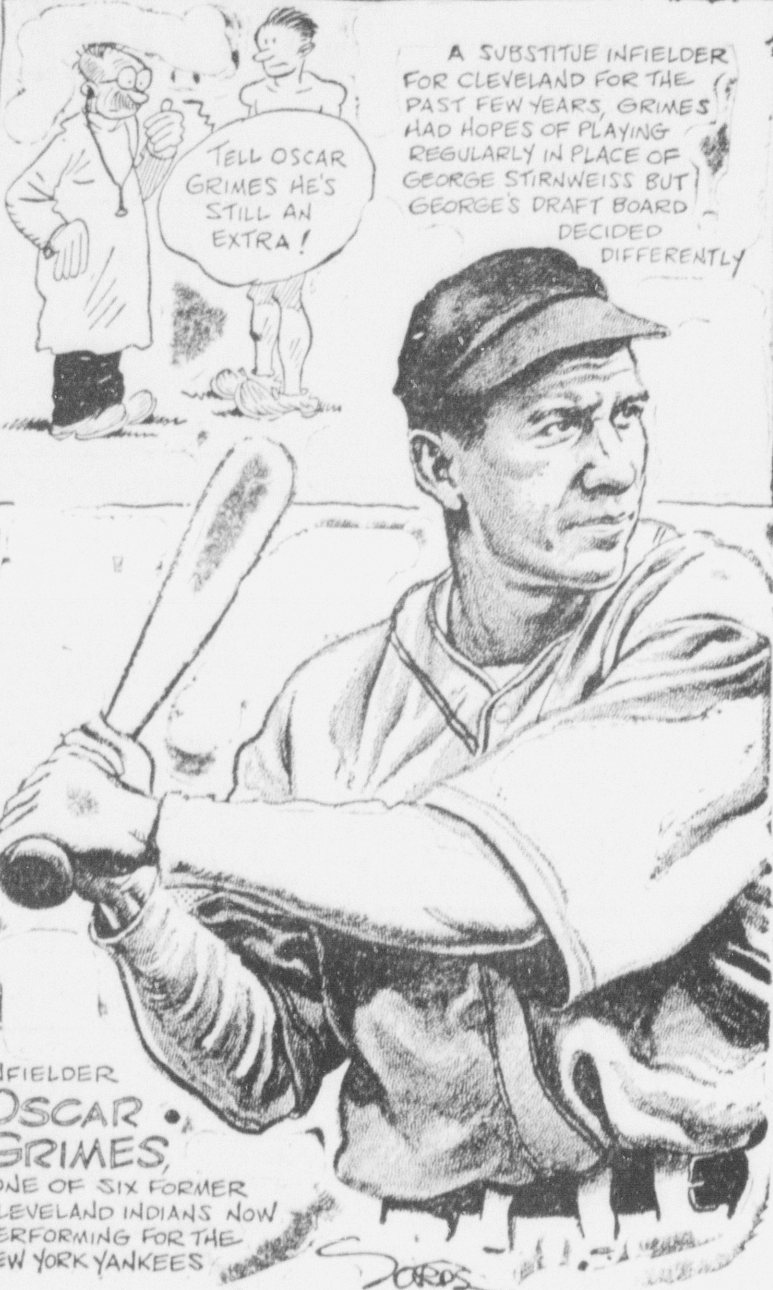

Mothers of Service Men Present A Flag

Three stars were added to the chapel service flag, they being in honor of Floyd Gantt, son of Mrs. Edith Gantt; Ralph Foster, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster, he being with the army in England; and John Reis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reis, who is in the navy. Another star will be added at the end of May when Miss Mary Foster enters the women's branch of the Marine Corps. Miss Foster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Foster, of Walnut Grove Farm.

John Leonard and Robert Wesley, children of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Schrey, were dedicated at the service.

Other numbers of the morning included: Recitations by beginners and primary department members, singing "America, the Beautiful";

Pennsylvania's leading part in providing the sinews of war to America's armed forces is made possible by the State's remarkable facilities for transportation of every modern kind.

The Pennsylvania Turnpike is the finest stretch of protected highway in the western world. More than 40,000 miles of State highway and rural roads and more than 45,000 miles of township roads provide motor access to every part of this Commonwealth, with a total mileage that would extend three times around the equator of the earth or stretch one-third of the distance between our planet and the moon.

In the total mileage of its State highways and their urban extensions, Pennsylvania exceeds all of the New England states and also exceeds all of the Pacific states or crepe. With deep V-neckline, the apron-skirt, sleeves and mantilla scarf were outlined in black lace, again.

Unusual and striking was the almost-severe dress Nancy Coleman wore at the Beverly Hills Hotel. In garnet crepe, the neckline was cut low and round, and was outlined with a tiny ruffle of self-fabric. The small cap sleeves were slightly puffed. Over the self-belt, the actress had slipped a small pale blue satin scarf embroidered in glittering beads, with looped beading.

ing the Eckels milk law of 1939 requiring the Department of Public Assistance to provide children of indigent parents with a pint of milk daily; appropriating $478,000 to publicize Pennsylvania and for the State Aeronautical Commission; placing the acquisition of privately-owned water companies by municipal authorities under the supervision of the Public Utility Commission; and providing for a four-semester high school course in American and State history.

Senate Majority Leader Weldon B. Heyburn, of Delaware, was forced to awaken Sen. Cyrus B. Tyler (R) Wyoming in his hotel and have him rushed to the Senate in order to obtain the necessary votes to override Democratic objections to the bill prohibiting labor unions from donating funds to political parties. Tyler, however, mistakenly cast his vote with the Democrats but corrected the error later over the minority's objections.

In addition to the State's steam railroads there are also 2,300 miles of electric railroads and also a system of motor bus lines which covers more than 5,000 miles of highway. This is the largest highway mileage for motor bus transportation of any state in the Union.

These combined transportation facilities for both labor and the materials of war have enabled the State's great resources of raw materials and its immense productive facilities to be utilized to full efficiency at the hour of our Nation's need.

FASHION PARADE

By Milo Anderson

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—The new short evening dresses that are so terribly practical, yet so very gay and romantic, have been graduated from dead black to light-hearted prints.

Faye Emerson, currently seen in Warner Bros. "Air Force," wears a smart shocking pink and black chemise dress. Simple charm is added through the use of a black lace shawl, tiny black lace gloves, and a row of lace at the skirt edge.

At Mocambo the other evening Judy Garland looked charming in a pale pink silk evening dress with all-over scroll pattern in midnight blue. A low square neck, and full-gathered skirt were flattering. Thrown over her shoulders was a jet-edged scarf of the dress fabric.

Ginger Rogers wore an ethereal sheer at The Players. The dress was made of alternate bands of finely hand-tucked white marquisette, and black lace. The shoulder and neck detail was plain black souffe.

At Romanoff's Dolores Moran stole the show in a short-skirted evening dress of emerald green Majority Floor Leader Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, of Lehigh, denied the accusation pointing out that dismissals could be affected "under existing laws."

Governor Martin was expected to approve the measure providing aid for police pension funds. The bill provides that the money will be raised by allotting one-half of the two per cent state tax on premiums paid by out-of-state casualty insurance companies to the communities in which the payments are made.

When the final gavel fell in the House and Senate on the 135th regular session, only a handful of legislators were on hand in addition to the presiding officers. None of the hilarity which highlighted other closings marked the end and only one member tossed a handful of legislative bills into the air when the presiding officers intoned "I now declare this session adjourned sine die."

FOURTH TERM By Jack Sords

Mr. Anthony Marino, brother of the bride, was usher.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Marino home; with dinner at Verdi's Restaurant, Philadelphia, at two o'clock, for members of the bridal party. A small family reception occurred at the Mignoni home at five o'clock, after which the newlyweds left for a week's honeymoon trip.

The bodice of the attractive bridal gown was of faille taffeta, and the full skirt of marquisette over taffeta swept to a long train. The bodice which was shirred, provided a long, close-fitting torso effect. Neck-line was V-shape, and the sleeves were long. Applique trim was used on the bodice. The veil of tulle was attached to a headress of white flowers. For the processional the former Miss Marino carried a white prayer book with shower of white sweet-peas, and for the recessional she carried white roses and lavender orchids.

The maid of honor was attired in light rose tone, and the bridesmaid in aquamarine. The gowns were made of marquisette. They had close-fitting necklines, tight bodices; long, full sleeves, and full skirts reached the floor. Button trim enhanced the front of the gowns. Applique bows appeared on the front of the skirts. The maids wore silver slippers. Their headpieces of marquisette, enhanced with flowers, matched the respective gowns, and from these long streamers in the back extended to the hem-lines of their skirts. Their bouquets were of mixed flowers.

The bride and her attendants wore single strands of pearls.

For the wedding trip, Mrs. Mignoni selected a silk suit of navy blue with white pique collar; hat, slippers and bag of navy blue, white kid gloves, corsage of gardenias, and a coat of aqua with red fox collar. She will reside with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mignoni while Ensign Mignoni is in the service. The bride is a graduate of St. Ann's parochial school; and the groom graduated from Bristol high school and from the State Teachers College at Millersville.

ambulance being a hearse converted into an ambulance. "You saw to those ambulances today," he said, drawing an example of the progress made by the Rescue Squad.

He urged those assembled to make this world a better place for the boys to come back to.

Dr. Allen H. Moore, head of the medical unit of the Bucks County Civilian Defense Units, spoke briefly, and called attention to the fact that physicians are leaving civilian life at a rapid rate and entering the services of their country. Dr. Moore was a medical man in World War I, having served 27 months. "We are losing doctors very fast," he said. "I have a letter from Washington right now which states that 1,000 more doctors are needed. Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester and Delaware counties are called upon to furnish all of them."

Referring to the people of Bucks County and the Rescue Squad in particular, Dr. Moore said "You are the most co-operative people I have ever contacted in Bucks County. I had occasion a few weeks ago to bring down here some medical supplies. I found the heartiest welcome and the best of co-operation. You deserve much credit. As long as there are people like the people of Bucks County, America will never die."

The American flag and also the Service Flag were then raised to Four service men, three of whom are Squad members, spoke briefly, they being: Lieut. William Bennett, Pvt. Norman Rigby, Corp. James Robinson, and Corporal Walter Gleason.

Col. Churchill Williams, head of Civilian Defense in Bucks County, was profuse in expressing his appreciation for the splendid cooperation given him in Bucks County. "I believe that nowhere have the people shown the willingness and desire to make civilian defense a real agency more so than here. This section of the county is the most vital one. It is the most rightly point of attack. This section is the joy and pride to those who have had anything to do with civilian defense. Bucks County is, according to those in Washington, considered one of the best organized in the country."

There were selections by the Bristol High School Band and the Bristol Cadet Corps.

The invocation was by the Rev. Arthur Gibson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Edgington; and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. John J. Coffey, St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Croydon.
